

December 19, 2002

Professor:

I caught some of your interview yesterday and had some comments. They are attached.

By the way, I had the pleasure of studying Constitutional Law with Arthur Kinoy, who as you probably know is one of the founders of the Center for Constitutional Rights. It was probably one of his last years of active teaching. And, contrary to what I heard from prior students, he did not get stuck on Marbury vs Madison and he finished the entire syllabus. On the last day of class, he was asking if anyone had kept tapes of all of the lectures. It would have made a great book.