

DeLong Introduction

Brad DeLong was an economic advisor during the Clinton administration. He is now an economics professor at Berkeley. He was quoted in a WSJ article back in July and I wrote him to express my views on a number of topics. My correspondence reiterates my concerns about the viability of information technology businesses, but also (in item 5) discusses my views current problems in corporate financial reporting. DeLong Correspondence..pdf Brad's short response quotes Keynes, as might be expected given his political orientation. DeLong Response.pdf